Predicting a draw game can be quite challenging, but it is not impossible. In soccer for instance: A draw game can be predicted by analyzing the statistics of past performances of both teams. One important factor to consider is the teams' win-draw-loss record. If both teams have a similar record, it is more likely that the game will end in a draw. (Another interesting factor is the teams' home/away record.)

However, the playing style of both teams is crucial in predicting a draw. If both teams are defensive-minded and are known for their strong defense, the probability of a draw increases. Conversely, if both teams are offensive-minded and have potent attacks, a high-scoring result can be predicted. Another critical factor to consider is the venue of the match. Home teams tend to have an advantage over visiting teams, and as a result, the probability of a draw decreases. However, if the game is being played on a neutral field, the chances of a draw increase.

Lastly, other external factors such as weather conditions, player injuries, and team morale can affect the outcome of a match. The possibility of a draw is also influenced by the teams' historical performance. For example, in the Portuguese Civil War (1825-1833), the army managed to conquer Porto and establish a republic.
